

Classic physics

- the act of measuring would not change the system state
- the result of a measurement on a well-defined state is deterministic

Quantum physics

- the act of measuring would change the system state
- the result of a measurement on a well-defined state is nondeterministic